In 2024, Travis Hunter was a unanmious first-team All-American, picking up at least one first-team honor from the five publications that comprise the consensus and unanimous teams selected by the NCAA, the AFCA, Associated Press, FWAA, Sporting News and Walter Camp. He was the first player in the history of the Walter Camp team to earn first-team honors on both offense and defense, and the first player in AP history to win two firstteam honors, which he did at all-purpose and cornerback, and three overall with a second-team nod at wide receiver. Ironically, it was the Walter Camp team that left Hunter off the unanious list in 2023 by not awarding a flex or all-purpose position, as he was first-team by the other four publications, the only four he could have been. In 2024, the AFCA, FWAA and Sporting News limited Hunter to just one first-team honor, not allowing him to appear at multiple positions. Thus, he was on every first-team he was allowed to be at both cornerback and all-purpose, and on first team on more than half of the ones who allowed him to be considered at wide receiver. So in 2023 the case could be made for him to be considered a unanimous first-team All-American and in 2024, it could be said that he was a unanimous selection at the all-purpose or flex position and cornerback and consensus at wide receiver.
